Pauly D: 'I Don't Know How To Say Gym, Tanning, Laundry In Italian!'

Posted 1/25/11 6:33 pm EST by Lisa Chudofsky in Jersey Shore, Top TV Shows

Earlier today we had the pleasure of confirming the news that the fourth season of "Jersey Shore" will be shot abroad in Italy. Immediately the cast starting tweeting their excitement, and Pauly D even gave us a call to share his expectations of the club scene, Vinny's relatives and, of course, the women in the 'old country.' Check out our chat with him below.

First, how freakin' psyched are you?

Oh my God, I'm so excited. I'm going to Italy, I can't believe it! It's always been a dream of mine.

So you've never been there?

No, but I have family there. My mother keeps in contact with them, but I don't speak the language...Maybe I can meet up with them, but I'll have to brush up on my Italian. I don't know how to say 'Gym, Tanning, Laundry' in Italian! Hey, do you know what time 'T-Shirt Time' is in Italy? This is the stuff I think about.

I imagine you'll be able to make it any time you want, no? Hopefully you can get in some T-Shirt Time with your relatives, but we hear it's a definite that you'll be meeting Vinny's extended family...

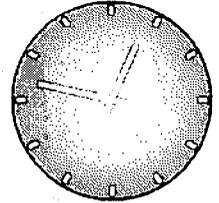

Yes! The food his family makes is amazing so I'm looking forward to hopefully being fed by them.

Where are you hoping to have a home base?

Rome or Milan would be cool. The night scene is supposed to be insane in Rome.

What are your expectations of Italian women?

I heard they're hot. Like, real Italian women, and they might even be the type to take home to your mother. I could find The One out there...you never know.

Do you think you'll have a harder time bringing Italian women back to the bachelor pad?

I'm a little worried about that. It's gonna be hard because we have a language barrier, and they might not know who we are. That's fine though, you just have to be yourself and hopefully they'll be into you.

Do you plan on getting your culture on while you're there?

That's important. I definitely want to see some museums and monuments, but I'm really curious about the club scene. I'm a deejay so that's important to me.

Do you feel like you'll need to behave better since you're in another country?

We probably should be on our best behavior only because I don't know what the laws are out there. I don't know what their jail is like. I don't want to be really hammered and act up someplace, because God forbid something goes wrong and we get locked up...We won't have anyone to call.

You're going to have to keep Snooki sober if you go to the beach.

Haha. Yeah, we really have to look out for each other, so I expect that we'll do everything as a group. This is the first time that any of us have ever gone to Italy, so we should do it all together and have each other's backs.

How do you think the natives will respond to your Jersey Shore style?

That's a good question. I hope they welcome us with open arms, and they're not like, 'Who are these guys?'. I'm proud to be a full-blooded Italian, and for me, this is kind of like a vacation where I'll be tracing my roots, so I hope they're not haters.

Italians really love their leather. Any chance we'll get to see you sporting some leather pants?

Maybe! They make some sick leather motorcycle pants out there...I'm definitely bringing my motorcycle if I'm allowed.

Wow is all I have to say...The Jersey Shore cast is not that bad...yeah they party and get into fights...but who hasn't in there life time? I know I am over the whole partying thing. But anyway they don't do anything different than any other American, they get a chance to go to Italy, so what? I'm sure any of us would love to go to another country!

You have kids? And it is so WHAT? How they act? Or make America look. God help us all.

Italians in Italy will not want Americans back in their country again after shooting that season! They better tone down the drunken public fighting, they're in a different country! They have different laws, the cast needs to watch out!

dulcemami commented | 18 months ago

Oh NO! Now we need translators and sub titles. Stupid. They should have gone to cali.

To Whom It May Concern:

It is with deep love and concern of both my Italian and my American cultures that I write this message.

Flag

The recent news that MTV intends to send the cast of Jersey Shore to Italy to film another season not only insults me as an American, but also as an Italian national. I hold both my cultures dear to me and living between two cultures means I spend my days working hard at being the best American I can be, as well as the best Italian. The cast of Jersey Shore displays nothing but the very worst of American pop-culture. Slapping the label of "Italian" on them—when many have been proven to be anything BUT Italian—only abuses another innocent country in the parading of ugly habits, egos, and cultures.

As an American I understand that MTV's main objective is ratings, entertainment, and income. I also understand that Jersey Shore has been extremely well-received by a stupidified public, if only for the ridiculously outrageous behavior of these young people who exhibit nothing but the most degraded form of young American imaginable. Is this MTV's goal??

I can only ask myself, "What good should come of this?" I know I will be bombarded by questions from my Italian family and friends who already dismiss much of American culture as unbecoming. Why perpetuate the lie that has been called "American culture" by vomiting these derelicts all over a country that has given the world so much beauty, culture, art, love, fashion, sophistication, and education? If the only answer is financial, I think MTV needs to reconsider how it uses its incredible powers of outreach and invest more in inspiring its followers to create, explore, enjoy, and share their real talents with America and the world.

Sincerely,

Elena Gumina Angeli

I agree. (My father was 100% Italian-Sicilian) But I was born and raised American w/our Italian culture infused in us and especially the morals! I am even deeply embarrassed by this. And hope MTV changes their mind!

I think Cali would suit them better and allot of people out west would like to meet them?!
